

See the person,
not the stereotype

National Reconciliation Week 2009 • 27 May – 3 June

The Reconciliation Barometer study shows that 100 per cent of Indigenous Australians and 91 per cent of other Australians believe our relationship with each other is important. But at the same time the study reveals a low level of trust between the two groups.

Trust of course starts by understanding each other better. Like a jigsaw, people comprise many parts and the more you see the clearer the picture becomes. NRW 2009 is an ideal time to find common ground, form new relationships and foster true reconciliation.
